SIGNIFICANCE OF THE COAT OF ARMS

The pin is the central feature of the Seventh Section Coat of Arms. This pin is Seventh Section. In its symbolism we see representations of the qualities which every Seventh Section Member strives to cultivate. These qualities are based on man's relation to God and his relationship to his fellow men. The basic form of the pin is that of the Maltese cross. The five stars stand for the individual's relationship to God. The center star represents Love; the surrounding stars represent Dependence, Fidelity, Humility, and Reverence. The feathers stand for man's relation to his fellow man. They are Fraternity, Industry, Loyalty, and Sacrifice.

The features surrounding the pin in the Coat of Arms also have an important significance. The Roman numeral seven (VII) obviously stands for Seventh Section. The Grecian lamp symbolizes leadership and academic pursuits. The fist grasping the bolts of lightning stands for power. The heart enclosing the clasped hands signifies heart and brotherhood.

KAPPA CHI HISTORY

Section tradition maintains that Seventh was originally a chapter of a national fraternity, Sigma Chi. The Beta Chapter of Sigma Chi was chartered at Wooster on March 1, 1875; the five charter members choosing the white tea rose as their chapter flower. In 1892, the charter was suspended "for want of good fraternity material in the school," but was re-established seven years later in 1899. During the last decade of the nineteenth century, the fraternity system at Wooster was very active, responsible for the creation of the "Index" which was originally a fraternity publication. About 1905, the administration allowed Sigma Chi to take residence at 809 Beall, in the house known today as Colonial Club. The letters can be seen today in the mantel of the old frat house.

Among the "Sigs" illustrious alumni are included such well known men as Elias Compton '81 (for whose wife the Hall is named) and Hugh McKean '16, the world-famous missionary to lepers at the Chieng ai, Indian leper asylum.

Unfortunately for the "Greeks" their influence was to wane under the incessant attack of the righteous synod members who wished to do away with organizations. The administration and the non-frat run "Voice" leveled unbelievable charges against the fraternity system, describing it as a defiler of innocent young men that detracted from their "loyalty to Wooster." Between prohibition articles and notices of temperance meetings we find this statement in the "Wooster Voice" of Wednesday, October 9, 1912: "(In fraternities...social life is abnormally developed. In addition to frat parties, stag and otherwise, there are the nightly gatherings around the fire with tobacco and cards, which many times extend into the 'we sma' hours.' Lessons are forgotten, training rules are broken and spiritual development is sadly neglected."

The propaganda took its toll. After a close call in 1910 (a tie vote in a faculty meeting which President Holden refused to break) the "fraternity question" finally came to a head at 11:30 on the night of February 13, 1913. In a secret meeting in Kauke Hall at the culmination of a stormy session the Board of Trustees voted 13-10 (4 members absent) to order the fraternities and sororities to cease initiating new members, thereby deeming them to fade from the scene in three more years. The reaction was immediate, three trustees resigned their posts in protest, and on the campus a boycott of college functions was declared by the frats to illustrate their necessity to Wooster's social scene. The "Voice" appealed to the students' "patriotism and loyalty to Wooster" in order to soothe the atmosphere, but an unusually high number of students quit the school during the succeeding years.

Three Sigma Chi's, Paul Patton, Joseph Hamilton and Charles Starrett are known to have lived together in the brand new Kenarden Lodge; tradition has it they stayed in the eastern-most or "seventh section." The bond of fellowship instilled by these old frat men which kept the Sigma Chi tradition alive in the Section, also caused the men in the section to band together to hold "section parties" to correct the lack of social functions that the disbandment of fraternities had caused.

The ban against fraternal-type organizations remained in effect through the 20's, a period in which the administration would tolerate nothing more than square dances and informal "boarding clubs". The natural tendency for group loyalty and competition between the sections distilled the unity of the sections and during an unexplained leniency of the administration, they made movements back in the direction of fraternities. At first they were merely sections, listed separately in the "Index" and competing in sports, but eventually they transformed further and began initiating pledges, holding meetings, and even assuming Greek letters.

Seventh's history in this form of section is cloudy but becomes clearer in 1952. In that year, faced with dwindling membership, the Section witnessed an unprecedented renaissance. From that year's pledge class came three Phi Beta Kappas, several of the college's student leaders and outstanding athletes for the next four years. The attitude of excellence and achievement that they established still prevails today.

On January 18, 1968, the name of the Section was changed to Kappa Chi. Correspondence with Sigma Chi headquarters verified no other fraternity used this designation. The new pin and coat of arms are identical to the former Kappa Kappa Kappa symbol except the K's on the top and right arms of the cross have been replaced with an X on the right arm alone.

In the last two decades Seventh has continued to set the pace for the rest of the campus. In 1966, the section took up residence in Bissman Hall, allowing more Kappas than ever before to live together. The "Pride of the Hill" won the Intramural Travelling Trophy the first time it was offered in 1965-66 and has continued its dynasty by winning the trophy again in 1972-73 and 1973-74, attempting to retire it forever in 1974-75. In 1973 the section initiated the famous McGaw Walk, traditionally we have helped canvass the community for the United Fund drive and annually we make a trip to Apple Creek State Hospital to offer our services.

Our spring formal has been an outstanding campus social event since 1955 when it was first held in old Severance Gym. The Kappa Choir has serenaded the co-eds on campus nearly every quarter during this period also.

Today Seventh represents the ideal of a men's section. Though one of the largest sections on campus for several years now, we still remain a fraternity of dedicated men, affording every member the life of a closely-knit group in spirit, the freedom of individual achievement, and the honor of a loyal fighting brotherhood.

PURPOSES OF A SECTION

The section system at Wooster is a blend between Greek letter fraternities and dormitory living. Though "fraternities" in the strict sense of the word, do not exist here, there is a bond of fellowship and a spirit of competition among the sections that makes for a healthy social and academic atmosphere with all activities centering toward the campus community rather than small secular groups.

Seventh Section has always taken a great deal of pride in being known as a real asset to the campus and a section with college spirit. The best way to learn about your fraternity, however, is not to listen to rumors and idle talk; but to examine its activities and functions. Seventh's activities can be divided into four categories: Social, Fellowship, Academic, and Athletic.

The main function of a section centers around its members' social life. Most campus activities, whether they provide opportunities for exercise, dancing, or merely relaxation, are coordinated through the sections. By providing numerous and varied programs a section can help its members to have a good time, but even more to develop socially by learning the proper conduct for every situation. It is one of Seventh's hopes that its men can acquire the good manners and social poise which will prove to be a valuable asset after graduation.

Although the social aspects of section living are important, almost of equal value is the fellowship within the section. College days form a span in life that holds tremendous opportunities for individual development, and fraternities must work to provide a congenial stimulating environment. One's section brothers are his best friends throughout his college life and for this reason the fellowship within a section can be a strong force in molding the character of all. Seventhians, traditionally heterogenous, have tried to maintain a provocative and motivating atmosphere, and also a bond of true fellowship among its members.

The classroom is the most important place on campus and the academic life is central to the college experience. For this reason, studies come first of all in the eyes of the Seventhians. Though grades are more an individual matter, they often become the concern of the section. Scholarship is stressed among section brothers and upperclassmen endeavor to help all those men who ask for assistance.

Whether it be in varsity or intramural sports, every section member has the opportunity (if he has the desire) to participate in organized athletics. A highly competitive year-round intramural program is offered. Seventh Section has always been proud of its athletic teams, whether they be victors or losers, as far as the section is concerned, sportsmanship is paramount.

The stress in Seventh is placed on the development of the individual: first in scholarship, then in physical, spiritual and social characteristics. The aim of our section is to become well-adjusted, well-educated men who are endowed with a sense of humor, a keen competitive spirit, and a sense of fair play.

SECTION OBLIGATIONS

1. Section Interest...

A man should not pledge unless he feels he can give a reasonable amount of time to section activities, to serious thought and real work contributed toward the improvement of the section. During pledging, this time may be spent in some general pledge project. After initiation the time may be spent in preparation for section activities, or in working through committees. The work of the section cannot be done by the officers alone, for the best officers are helpless without the support of the members. As a section member, you are expected to contribute your time and talents.

2. Personal Conduct...

On a small campus such as we have here at Wooster, almost every one is known. He is therefore labeled as a member of a particular section and his actions reflect on the group of which he is a part. It is therefore expected that a member will always conduct himself in a manner fitting of the section, bearing in mind that courtesy and consideration for the other fellow is extremely important in a student environment. Members should conduct themselves as gentlemen, uphold a high moral standard and exhibit the foundation for good manners, not only in the section and among section brothers, but everywhere and to everybody.

3. Scholarship...

Above all, the purpose of coming to college is to get an education. Nothing is more fundamental. Scholarship is the most important of all college activities and nothing should interfere with this principle purpose of attending school. As a member of Seventh you should strive to attain a high scholastic standing, realizing that your level of achievement will follow you through the rest of your life.

4. Attitude of Mind...

This does not mean that the section in any way desires to control the thoughts of its members, but every member should regard the section with a spirit of sincerity and respect and make a conscientious effort to live up to the promises which he makes.

5. Financial Obligations...

Since we try to operate a fairly strict budget, all dues must be paid on time unless some special arrangements are made with the treasurer. It takes money to run the section as an efficient organization and everyone is expected to do his share.

6. Fraternalism...

One of the first things pledges learn about their section brothers are their imperfections. There are very few perfect brotherhoods on this earth and sections are obviously not numbered among this select few. Seventh has ideals, but it is not ideal, for an ideal dies when it is reached. One of the great things about a section is that it obligates its members to live in harmony with one another in spite of their shortcomings. The temptation to condemn is too strong in all of us, but as a Kappa we try to learn of tolerance, sympathy and understanding.

7. Pledge Training...

No man wants to belong to a section he cannot respect. But in order for one to respect his section, he must first know its members' ideals, and his fellow pledges. In Seventh Sections, the tasks which the pledges are expected to perform are not merely given in order to impress them with the power of the section to demand and obtain their services in a laborious and sometimes humiliating form. More important, pledge training affords an opportunity for the pledges to become acquainted with their section, and at the same time accustoms pledges to making sacrifices for the general good of the section. Besides assuring them of its worthiness of their respect, this method of discipline offers the additional satisfaction of diverting the benefits of their labor directly toward the progress of an institution in which they have a vital interest.

e.) The identity and motivation of the dissenting voters are not required unless challenged by a simple majority. In the case of a successful challenge, all unidentified blackballs are null and void. A second vote may be taken provided the Section approves by a simple majority vote. If there are still three (3) or more members opposed, the man must be rejected and not considered again until the next designated pledging period.

SECTION 2. Black and whiteball privileges shall be restricted to those actives members who are not delinquent in their dues and who have not been absent from more than one-fourth of the Section meetings in the year preceding the blackball session. Appeal may be made to the Cabinet.

All pledges must undergo informal initiation, physical condition permitting.

Following the informal initiation, each pledge shall be evaluated and voted on by the Section members. If ten percent or more of the active members are opposed to admitting a pledge to active membership, his connection with the Section must be severed. e.) Sophomores who will be going through informal initiation will not be permitted to attend ball meetings.

SECTION 3. A social fee, also determined by the majority vote of the Section at the beginning of the year shall be assessed to all active members and all social members. However, married members and social are not required to pay dues. Attendance at the Section formal by married or social members requires the payment of any possible assessment. The Treasurer shall determine amount of assessment.

SECTION 4. Any member, who for two quarters (excluding off campus study) fails to be financially active (dues paying member) has his membership terminated with Seventh Section unless he can present a valid excuse (as decided by the Kappa Court). ARTICLE VII - Room Drawing SECTION 1. A room drawing for the next academic year shall be held in the Spring. A notice of the room drawing, along with a seniority listing of the members, shall be posted a week before the drawing. SECTION 2. The draw shall be conducted by the Secretary, and Resident Assistant according to the procedure set forth by the Office of the Deans.

SECTION 3. It shall be the responsibility of each individual either to draw for himself or to authorize someone else to draw for him. Such authorization shall be in writing and shall be presented at the drawing.

SECTION 5. Students on Junior Year Abroad, Washington Semester, Non-Western Area Studies Program, the International School of America or other similar programs, shall not be penalized for participation in these programs by loss of seniority. Their time away from Wooster shall be counted as dues paying semester.

SECTION 6. Residency in the singles will be determined upon the basis of the lowest number having the highest priority of choice.

Residency in the double will be determined by adding two members' together. The lowest total number shall receive the double. In case of a tie, the group with the individual holding the lowest total number shall receive the double.

SECTION 7. No section member shall participate in the room drawing unless he plans to reside in the section. If any member is not sure whether he will live in the section (even if his draw is high enough), he shall present a complete analysis of his tentative plans to the secretary at least two days prior to room drawing. If there is a question about the motives of the member's draw, the Kappa Court shall convene to adjudicate the matter. Since violation of this article is a serious breach of promise, such violation is subject to severe fine by the Kappa Court.

The Chief Justice shall have the voting privilege and is responsible for the preparation of a written opinion of the Court on all decisions.

SECTION 5. In case one of the Court members is involved in the disciplinary incident, the Court is empowered to replace the member with another from the same class. If the Chief Justice should be involved, his temporary replacement shall be elected by the Section membership.

SECTION 6. The decision of the Court is final so far as Section action is concerned. The Section realizes the right of the College to repeal any decision of the Court. Appeals from any decision of the Court shall be made only to the President of the College.

ARTICLE X - Removal From Office

Failure of any elected officer to fulfill the duties of his office can warrant removal from that office and immediate election to fill that vacated position.

SECTION 1. The procedure of initiating removal shall progress as follows:

- a.) Five (5) active members must jointly file charges with the Cabinet.
- b.) The Cabinet shall review the allegations and decide whether they are justified to the extent of requiring a membership vote. Such a decision requires a two-thirds (2/3) assenting vote of the entire Cabinet eligible to vote.
- c.) The accused officer is allowed to retain his seat on the Cabinet, but is not allowed to vote in the above decision. Should any or all of the accusing members be a member of the Cabinet, they also are not to vote.

SECTION 2.

- a.) Upon the decision of a membership vote, the Cabinet shall call a meeting of the membership, not to be held sooner than twenty-four (24) hours following the decision. The charges shall be drawn up formally and posted.

- c.) The five (5) members who initially presented charges shall elect one spokesman to serve as prosecutor.
- d.) The accused may present his own defense or use the services of any other active member.
- e.) Following formal presentations of the prosecutor and defense, in that order, general discussion will be allowed.

SECTIONS SONGS

"SWEETHEART OF KAPPA CHI"

The girl of our dreams is the sweetest girl of all the girls we know,
Each sweet co-ed, like a rainbow trail fades in the after glow.
The blue of her eyes and the gold of her hair are a blend of an autumn,
And the moonlight beams on the girl of our dreams, she's the sweetheart of Kappa Chi.

"THE GOBLET SONG"

Break out that old silver goblet
with the Kappa Chi upon it
And we'll open up another keg of beer;
For we don't go to school just to learn the golden rule
But to raise hell while we're here.

For we are Kappa Chi brothers,
We are pledged to one another,
And we'll fight to be the best fraternity.
And we'll shout "Come Seven!"
As we head for Heaven
To proclaim our loyalty!
